

A photograph of a digital display panel showing the number "0.25". The digits are formed by bright yellow segments on a red background. The display is part of a larger electronic device, with other blurred components visible in the background.